

Disclaimer:

The e-learning scheme is not designed to replace or reproduce the BSI British Standard Codes of Practice, but will make reference to them, and include some of the same words where it is not possible to sensibly find alternatives e.g. for definitions. Where this is the case we have obtained the permission of BSI.

This course has been developed as a tool for businesses to use to help them understand the British Standard Codes of Practice. The SIA is not responsible for the way any information provided is interpreted.

The SIA provides no warranty or guarantee of any kind, express or implied, about the completeness, accuracy, reliability or suitability of this information in relation to any assessment for conformance with a British Standard. Any reliance you place on such information is therefore strictly at your own risk.

Please note that the British Standard codes of practice are updated periodically. Where the law requires something different to what is stated in a code of practice, then the legislation always takes precedence.

In no event will the SIA be liable for any costs incurred, loss of profit or any other commercial damages, indirect or consequential, resulting from the implementation of any policies outlined in courses.

All links are for information purposes only and are not warranted for content, accuracy, or any other implied or explicit purpose.

Every effort is made to keep the learning site up and running smoothly. However, the SIA takes no responsibility for, and will not be liable for, the site being temporarily unavailable due to technical issues beyond our control.